

ANTHONY BATEMAN

BASIC TRAINING IN MENTALISATION BASED TREATMENT

3 day training workshop

Anthony Bateman, MA FRCPsych is a Visiting Professor in the Psychoanalysis Unit at University College London. He is a Consultant Psychiatrist and Psychotherapist and Honorary Senior Lecturer at University College and Royal Free Medical Schools, Barnet, Enfield, and Haringey Mental Health NHS Trust, and St Ann's Hospital, London.

In collaboration with Peter Fonagy he has developed and manualised an innovative treatment for personality disorder (Mentalisation Based Treatment – MBT). He organised and successfully completed the first randomised controlled trial of day treatment of personality disorder in the UK. The research has led to major national and international interest because MBT treatment was found to be more effective than standard care when delivered by mental health professionals.

Workshop Objectives

By the end of the workshop participants will be able to

- Demonstrate an understanding of the mentalising problems of Borderline Personality Disorder
- Recognise mentalising and non-mentalising interventions
- Develop and maintain a mentalising therapeutic stance
- Use basic mentalising techniques in their everyday clinical work in group and individual psychotherapy

Learning methods will include

- Discussion of clinical examples
- Role plays
- Video material

Workshop participants will be expected to contribute actively
